SPEAKERS

Dr. T. Lynn Smith is a respected educator, minister, author, and leadership development expert who equips others for service and ministry. She serves as Director of The Salvation Army's Jack McDowell School for Leadership Development and is a licensed minister and volunteer chaplain. Dr. Smith also holds significant leadership roles within the Church of God in Christ at both the jurisdictional and national levels. Passionate about mentoring leaders, encouraging young adults, and composing music, she inspires others to embrace their calling and purpose. She wrote Now She Leads: The Call No One Can Deny, a powerful testament to leadership and faith.

Dr. Cathy Owens-Oliver is an accomplished educator, author, and trainer who serves The Salvation Army as a Trainer and Curriculum Writer. A National Board-Certified Teacher with a doctorate in Educational Leadership, she is passionate about equipping others through teaching, leadership development, and mentoring, and is the author of the Amazon bestselling book Why Schools Fumble.

Dr. Jennifer Rexroth holds a Bachelor of Arts in English from Winthrop University and a Master of Arts in Educational Ministries from Columbia International University. With over 20 years of experience serving The Salvation Army and nearly a decade in higher education, she now serves as a Trainer and Curriculum Writer, helping individuals discover their unique gifts, passions, and purpose.

Major Claudia Roseno serves as Assistant Principal of the School for Leadership and Educational Development, where she is committed to developing leaders through Christ-centered service and practical ministry. With a deep passion for pastoral care, spiritual growth, and community impact, she continues to inspire others through compassionate leadership and faithful service.
